Andrew Clausen represents clients in litigation and business-related issues, including contract disputes, statutory claims, and business torts. With experience at all phases of the litigation process, Andrew works closely with his clients to develop a litigation strategy appropriate to their business objectives.

Andrew also has more than 20 years of experience as a paralegal prior to his admission to the bar. In that capacity, he represented clients as diverse as major financial institutions to lower-income individuals on matters from personal injury to class actions. His work as a paralegal informs his practice in complex litigation matters.
