Anthony Aprea concentrates his practice in the areas of insurance coverage and general and professional liability defense, with an emphasis on the defense of lawyers and law firms against liability claims. He also has experience litigating toxic tort and business-related disputes.

Before joining Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP, Anthony practiced at a firm in Providence where he defended hospitals, physicians, and other health care professionals in litigation, licensing, and administrative law matters in Massachusetts and Rhode Island state and federal courts.

During law school, Anthony was a member of the Student Council of Presidents, a Kaplan Student Representative, and a peer mentor. He also served as a research assistant to Gabriel H. Teninbaum.
