For the last two decades, April Dahl has focused her practice on tort litigation, including cases involving product liability, toxic tort, indoor air quality, chemical exposure, construction defect, premises liability, automobile, and general liability matters.

April's clients range from small, privately-held companies to Fortune 500 companies. She is a member of the national defense team for one of the firm's largest self-insured clients, requiring pro hac vice representation throughout the country.

April's construction practice includes representing manufacturers, and general and trade contractors, in complex property damage and personal injury cases nationwide. She also assists manufacturers and construction companies in pre-suit claims and investigations under Florida's Construction Defects Statute, Chapter 558, Florida Statutes. April is well versed in the Florida Building Code, with particular emphasis on wind resistance and water intrusion.

April is a member of Hinshaw's Executive Committee. She joined the firm in 2004 and was previously a law clerk.

Prior to joining Hinshaw, April was a summer associate at a civil litigation firm in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. She also worked as a summer intern in the Broward County State Attorney's Office.

During law school, April participated in Notre Dame Law School's London summer program.
