John Nader represents an array of sophisticated corporate clients, including banks and financial institutions, loan servicers, and direct and indirect finance companies in consumer financial litigation in state, federal, and bankruptcy courts.

John defends the interests of his clients in both individual-plaintiff and class actions matters, including claims arising under the following statutes:

- Telephone Consumer Protect Act
- Fair Credit Reporting Act
- Fair Debt Collection Practices Act
- Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act
- Truth in Lending Act
- State consumer protection and debt collection acts
- State retail installment sales acts, and Uniform Commercial Codes

John understands that litigation can be costly and disruptive. Mindful of this fact, he emphasizes efficiency and strives to provide his clients with exit strategies, and advice on minimizing future risk.

In addition, John has experience handling construction and real estate disputes representing owners, developers, and large general contractors.

Before joining Hinshaw, John helped lead the Washington, D.C. office of a New Orleans-based firm handling financial services disputes in Maryland, D.C., and Virginia, along with a nationwide class action practice.
