Julia Terry represents the interests of lenders and borrowers in business and commercial transactions. Leveraging her extensive experience, she helps clients in virtually all manner of banking, finance, real estate, and lending-related matters.

Julia works with institutions and entities of all sizes. She handles commercial real estate and loan transactions as well as the negotiation of technology service provider contracts. Julia advises companies on how to appropriately transfer third-party risk to effectively manage operational and compliance risks.

In order to assist clients in managing technology risk, Julia handles the negotiation of hosted applications, cloud subscription services, and application service provider agreements. She also has extensive experience with premises software license and maintenance agreements, service level agreements, and project implementation documentation, including project scope and timeline, deliverables, milestones, acceptance, and testing criteria.

Julia also helps clients navigate asset-based lending transactions, real estate portfolio acquisitions and dispositions, foreclosures, and general business and regulatory matters.

Having spent more than a decade as Vice President and Corporate Counsel for a New Orleans-based bank, Julia provides clients with exceptional industry-specific insights. Her background further includes working for a title insurance company in Atlanta and spending several years in private practice at firms in Louisiana and Mississippi.
