Paul Markese has over 20 years of litigation experience defending his clients. He focuses his practice on toxic tort and environmental litigation, with considerable experience in the areas of asbestos, silica, and occupational disease claims. He defends various industrial product and equipment manufacturers, contractors, and premises owners in toxic tort personal injury claims covering a broad range of products, including pumps, valves, steam traps, boilers, turbines, and ceiling tile manufacturers. Paul oversees all aspects of the litigation process from inception to resolution for hundreds of matters per year and regularly defends clients in a variety of jurisdictions. His clients include several Fortune 500 companies, an engineering firm, and a major appliance manufacturer with offices around the globe.

Paul joined Hinshaw in 1997. He is an active member of the firm's Defense Litigation practice group and the Toxic Tort specialty group. He has also served as an instructor with Hinshaw University, the firm's nationwide attorney training and education program.
